No. 28.—MEMORANDUM, DATED 15TH JUNE 1918, PREPARED BY THE CENTRAL FINANCIAL BOARD.

How Boasting Helps the Germans.

How can I help to win the war? In the question which should be present in the mind of everyone in India today. Very many thousands of Indian soldiers have fought gallantly side by side with their British comrades in France, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Palestine and elsewhere, and good services have been performed by Indian leaders and by Indian corps raised in various parts of India. Everyone cannot go out to fight, but there are few who desert from in one way or another to back up our soldiers in the field. Besides scattering of men drawn from India, from England, from France and from the United States are protecting India from an enemy who if successful, would rob and oppress the people of this country, and therefore it is the duty of every true Indian to help in every possible way the soldiers who are bravely fighting for them. It is astonishing but it is none the less true that there are people in India today who instead of wanting to win the war are hindering the efforts of the army and are even helping the enemy. They do not know the laws they are doing; they do not understand that their efforts are making it more difficult for victory to be won and for peace to be restored to the nations of the earth. In modern warfare it is not only the soldier who has to play his part. The troops actually fighting must be supplied with rifles, guns, ammunition, food and many other things which have to be produced by people who stay at home, and have to be sent by ships long distances over the sea to the soldiers in the field. Those who make it more difficult for the supplies to be produced and for the ships to carry them to the fighting men are assisting the Germans and their allies in exactly as if they are actually working for the enemy.

It may be said that no one in India would willingly assist the soldiers of his own country who are fighting his battles or would add to the hardships which they have to face. This may be true, but it is also true that people who during the war have been helped by buying them, by looking them up in loans, or by working them down for use as ornaments are doing serious harm to their own country and to all the countries which are engaged in fighting for the liberty of mankind. Even those thoughtful people who buy silver ornaments are thereby weakening the practice of saving as the silver and for making these ornaments stand at the present time be obtained in any other way. Such persons probably do not know that if rupees are hoarded in India the Government have to buy silver in far distant foreign lands, and in doing it enormous distances across the sea in order to make the new rupees which are necessary to carry on the business of the country. Here is a fact which will help to show what hoarding means. During the last two years the Government have been compelled to buy silver in order to coin no less than 50 crores of rupees to take the place of those, which have been thoughtlessly hoarded by people in India. Further they have now found it necessary to make arrangements to bring from our great friend and ally, America, an additional amount of silver to enable them to raise 50 crores more of rupees. A huge part of this silver is on its way to India and the remainder will shortly be sent here.

The supply and purchase of these huge quantities of silver are very wasteful in many ways. In the first place these purchases mean that India sends her resources abroad in return for more metal. If the Government of India had lent the money required to buy the silver, India would have retained interest charges amounting to more than Rs. 5 crores a year. This additional income would have made it possible for the Government either to reduce taxation or else to spend larger amounts for the benefit of India either by providing for better education or sanitation, or in other ways.

Again, we can see in this matter how a lesson from our enemies. Germany has been able to carry on the war for so long largely because she adopted as one guiding principle that of "waste nothing." The hoarding of silver in India is a most wasteful waste of an essential of war. Exactly the same applies to the hoarding of gold. It is almost as bad as hoarding shells and other munitions instead of using them to beat against the enemy. The Prime Minister of England has said we shall silver bullets will win the war, and yet in India, by hoarding our silver and gold, we are hiding away silver and gold bullets, so that they can be of no help in winning victory.

It is also important to mention that in all other countries except India a note issue has been developed and popularised in order to economise the metal used for coin. This is especially the case in Japan where very small notes indeed are now in circulation. India is the only country which cannot take any instead of notes to the enormous extent which she now does. The result is that people of other countries are benefiting greatly from this policy, so that they grow richer at India's expense.

Apart from the effect of the practice of hoarding on the wealth of India, it must also be remembered that the production of silver from the mines of America will be the source of men who would otherwise be engaged in war work, as the Americans are fighting on our side and the soldiers they have sent to the battlefield require enormous quantities of food and military supplies to enable them to conquer the enemy. The silver which America is sending to India has to be taken in loans to the exports, and this adds to the difficulties of securing the American supplies when they are engaged in carrying supplies for the war. Then, when the silver has reached the ports it has to be taken many thousands of miles by ship to this country at a time when every vessel is wanted for the purposes of the war and for carrying soldiers which people in India would be very glad to have such as cotton cloth and silk which as the present time wrong to the detriment for ships for other purposes cannot be brought to this country in the same quantities as before the war. The consequence of the shortage of ships is that the stocks of cloth and silk as well as of other articles used by the people of India are much smaller than in ordinary times and that prices are much higher.

It has been shown that huge amounts of silver have been brought by the Government within the past few years. But even there will not be sufficient to provide rupees if hoarding continues, and it cannot be too strongly declared that this practice is most harmful to India and to her soldiers. In the first place, instead of spending money to buy the silver India would have done much more upon it and the money could then have been spent in providing silver, clothes and food for soldiers, and in building more ships which might have brought to this country supplies that every one wishes to have such as silk and cotton cloth just mentioned. Secondly, when hoarding makes it more difficult to obtain articles like silk and cotton cloth the prices of these articles as well as of foodstuffs and other necessities are raised and the people who depend on these are thus injuring themselves and their friends.

There is no reason whatever why people should hoard rupees in India. The Government is just and powerful and there are many opportunities for safely investing money which is not required for the time being so that it can earn interest and increase the wealth of its owner. In all foreign countries which have become rich and prosperous, the people instead of hoarding use the money which they have to spare to make more money and they thus benefit not only themselves but the whole community. There are Post Office savings banks and Government loans in which they can invest and from which they can draw interest and their money when used in this way is not liable to be lost or stolen by thieves, as it would be if they followed the practice of hoarding which is so common in this country. In India too, as has been stated, plenty of opportunities can be found for placing money where it is absolutely safe and when it can earn good interest. If a person has spare money which he is likely to want at short notice he can deposit it in the Post Office savings bank or buy Post Office cash certificates with it. Or if he is not likely to require it immediately he can invest it in War Bonds which pay a very substantial rate of interest. It is a direct benefit to him to use it in either of these ways. It is also a direct benefit to the country since any money lent to Government will be spent in India in buying for the soldiers, wheat, rice and other foodstuffs as well as jute, cotton, hides, boots and shoes. A huge demand for all these means good profits for the sports and other producers and adds to the wealth and prosperity of the whole country.

It will be clear then to any one who looks at the question of hoarding intelligently that the practice is a bad and a foolish one. Hoarding impoverishes the soldiers who are fighting for India and thus helps the enemies of the Indian people. It also prevents money from being used to earn profits in the shape of interest, and it makes more difficult for Government to buy Indian produce for the use of the Army in the field.

Great harm is done to the world by want of thought. The hoarding of rupees in India affords an illustration of this truth. It is not too much, however, to believe that once the facts are realised every patriotic Indian will not only avoid hoarding himself but will do all in his power to persuade others from following a practice which benefits and enriches the bitterest foe of his country.

COMMISSIONER

Sole, the 21st June 1906.

CONTROL BY GOVERNMENT OF STOCK DEALINGS IN CERTAIN MATERIALS.

The Government of India have, for some time, been considering the necessity of controlling dealings in material which is required for supply to the armies in the field, and generally for the prosecution of the war. It is now imperative that information should be obtained as to the stocks of such materials held in the country, in order to provide for immediate war requirements; to maintain the supplies required for essential industries, such as railways, railways, engineering works and textile mills; and also to avoid the wastage that results from the holding of unnecessary stocks. The prices recently demanded for materials of this class cannot be justified by the export charges. In the Colombo market the lowest price asked for steel wire rope is as much as 100 per cent above the actual cost of the material exported as primary production. Many similar instances could be cited. It is unfair to industrial concerns that competitors should demand or export such profits. The chief cause for these high prices is the restriction of imports and the consequent competition among buyers for the small amount of business that is available. With locally supplied materials, the competition is more keen, and the demand largely exceeds the supply, prices have been forced higher and higher by sales between dealers who are competing for the enhanced profits caused by the great increase in the import of such materials.

At the instance of Government, a meeting of representatives of commercial and industrial interests in India, has recently discussed the whole question. The decision of the majority of the representatives present at that conference was that there is within articles should be put under control, in order to conserve stocks as far as possible for the material needs of the country, and also in order to prevent speculation which is one of the chief causes of the present abnormally high prices. In addition to those materials already controlled, it was proposed to bring under control—

Steel plates.	Steel wire ropes.
Refined and black iron sheets.	Steel castings.
Steel or iron beams, girders, bars, shafts.	Timber.
Tools, engines and other metal sections.	Copper tubing.

As, acting on this decision, Government has decided to control all dealings in these articles, under the Customs of India Rules, and an order under this rule has been published. The order does not affect retail trade, except in the case of steel plates thicker than 3/16" iron or steel beams or girders, and steel wire ropes. In these cases no stores of the retailer's may be held, and no sales may be made, without the permission of the Controller of Merchandise in each circle. In the case of the other articles mentioned certain limited quantities have been fixed, and where there are no specified stocks may be held and sales made within reasonable limits. Where the exact quantity is specified, the order requires—

- A quarterly return of stocks from all persons holding three;
- A receipt from the Controller in the case of every sale in excess of the quantities specified in the order; and
- A license to hold stocks in excess of the quantities specified, which must be held by all persons who desire to hold stocks.

It is not the intention of Government to interfere unnecessarily with ordinary business trade, and license will be granted freely where the material is required for essential industries. Provision is also made in the order for the issue to a holder of a permit which may cover a large number of purchases without imposing the necessity of reporting the seller's name, in such case. Advantage will therefore be taken of this provision for manufacturing firms and it will be possible for Controllers at their discretion to issue permits for sale in such cases, ensuring the entire quantity of these materials required by such firms is supplied at once. Detailed forms of application for permits for sale, licenses to hold stocks, and forms of quarterly returns can be obtained at the office of all Controllers of Merchandise. The order will come into effect on the 1st July 1906 and from that date dealing in stock in the controlled materials above that date should report their applications to the respective Controllers without delay.

A. H. KNAPP,
Acting Secretary to Government.
